

O autorach

Marek Derenowski received his PhD in applied linguistics from Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. He is a teacher and a teacher educator working at the Department of English Studies of the Faculty of Pedagogy and Fine Arts of Adam Mickiewicz University, Kalisz, Poland. He also works at the Institute of Modern Languages of State University of Applied Sciences, Konin, Poland. For the last seventeen years, he has also been a teacher of English in senior high-school. His major interest is in teacher education and professional development, the place of the target language culture in foreign language education as well as learner and teacher autonomy.

e-mail: dereno@icpnet.pl

Martin Hinton is an Assistant Professor in the Institute of English Studies at the University of Łódź, where he also completed his Ph.D. He has worked for many years as a teacher trainer in Poland as well as teaching practical English to all age groups at all levels. Focused on the nature of the learner, he has written and lectured extensively on language learning aptitude and individual learner differences.

e-mail: mdhinton@tlen.pl

Anna Kiszczak is a PhD student at the English Department, Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, Lublin, Poland. Her MA thesis addressed the issues of disciplinary reading in an EFL context and the implementation of the functional language analysis approach. She is currently working on her doctoral dissertation which investigates the process of increasing the learning potential of subject-specific expository texts in EFL settings by means of readers' self-generated questions. Her research interests concern different issues in English language instruction, in particular content-area reading, English for Academic Purposes, Content and Language Integrated Learning, and text-based questioning.

e-mail: kiszczak.anna@gmail.com

Karina A. Melezhik is Associate Professor, Candidate of Philology Science. She is Head of the Department of Foreign Languages for Social and Economic Sciences, Taurida National Vernadsky University, Ukraine. In 2004 she graduated from the Faculty of Foreign Languages of this university with Master's Degree degree in English and French language and literature. In 2010 she defended her Candidate's dissertation in the area of Germanic languages, entitled Sociolinguistic variability of the English 'real' television discourse (based on the reality show 'Big Brother'). The theme of her doctoral dissertation is From global English to English lingua franca: The problems of communicative and pragmatic variability. Thus far she has published 25 scientific papers.

email: melezhik.karina@yandex.ua

Anna Mystkowska-Wiertelak received her doctoral degree in applied linguistics from Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. She is a teacher and a teacher trainer working at the English Department of the Faculty of Pedagogy and Fine Arts of Adam Mickiewicz University in Kalisz, Poland, as well as the Institute of Modern Languages of the State University of Applied Sciences in Konin, Poland. Her main interests comprise, apart from teacher education, second language acquisition theory and research, language learning strategies, learner autonomy, form-focused instruction and motivation.

email: mystkows@amu.edu.pl

Mirośław Pawlak is Professor of English in the Department of English Studies at the Faculty of Pedagogy and Fine Arts of Adam Mickiewicz University in Kalisz, Poland and the Institute of Modern Languages of State School of Higher Professional Education, Konin, Poland. His areas of interest are SLA theory and research, form-focused instruction, corrective feedback, classroom discourse, learner autonomy, communication and learning strategies, individual learner differences and pronunciation teaching. Mirośław Pawlak is the editor-in-chief of the journal Studies in Second Language Learning and Teaching (www.sssl.t.amu.edu.pl) and the book series Second Language Learning and Teaching (<http://www.springer.com/series/10129>).

email: pawlakmi@amu.edu.pl

Tomasz Róg, PhD, is Head of the Department of Philology at Stanisław Staszic University of Applied Sciences in Piła, specializing in applied linguistics and methodology of language teaching. He is an author of numerous articles dealing with foreign language pedagogy, published in Poland and abroad, as well as a book on the development of intercultural communicative competence among students participating in the Erasmus programme. His professional experience includes teaching linguistics, history of English, phonetics, contrastive English-Polish grammar, descriptive grammar and language teaching methodology. He has conducted many workshops for both pre- and in-service language teachers and is an active member of the Modern Language Association of Poland.

e-mail: tomaszrog@yahoo.co.uk