

Notes on Contributors

Renata Agolli holds a BA in English Language and Literature and an MA (First Class Hons) in TESOL. She has been a speaker in different international conferences and has published in peer-reviewed journals. She has worked as a CLIL consultant and practitioner in Rome, Italy. Her research interests pertain to CLIL, ICT, adult/business education and modern pedagogies.

e-mail: renata_it@hotmail.com

Keith Farr is a teacher and proficiency test developer working at the Swedish Defence University in Stockholm, Sweden. He holds an MA in TESOL from Lancaster University. He currently teaches officers and cadets of the Swedish Armed Forces and is also responsible for Sweden's Stanag 6001 English Language Proficiency Test project. His most recent research interest is learner motivation.

e-mail: keith.farr@fhs.se

Damaris Ana Ruth Panzachi Heredia is a candidate for the Doctor in Letters' Program, UNMDP. She is a graduate ELT, UNMdP and a member of the research team Cuestiones del Lenguaje, UNMdP. She is a teacher of Oral Discourse II, Teacher Training Program, UNMDP and also teaches Language III and IV at the English/Spanish-Spanish/English Sworn Translation Program, UCAECE MdP.

e-mail: dpanzachi@ucaecemdp.edu.ar

Hadrian Lankiewicz, D. Litt. in applied linguistics and PhD in literary studies; he currently is Associate Professor in the Department of Applied Linguistics and Translation Studies of the University of Gdańsk, Poland. His scientific interests oscillate between history, American literature and applied linguistics, with the primary focus on language acquisition and foreign language teaching methodology. In recent years, his research has been inspired by the application of an ecological metaphor to the study of language and its learning. Drawing on the concept of multi-competence and political autonomy in the process of language learning, he has concentrated on issues of marginalization, empowerment and legitimization in the use of English as a foreign language.

e-mail: hadrianlank@interia.pl

Pedro Luis Luchini is a Doctor in Letters, UNMdP, MA in ELT and Applied Linguistics, King's College, University of London, UK, and ELT, UNMdP. He is Full Professor at UNMdP is in charge of Oral Discourse II, Advanced Communication I & II. He is also Head of the English Language Department at UCAECE MdP and CADS Secondary school, Mar del Plata, Argentina as well as a co-director of the research group: Cuestiones del Lenguaje, UNMdP.

e-mail: luchinipedroluis@gmail.com

Jakub Przybył is an EFL and ESP teacher at Adam Mickiewicz University (AMU Language School) and WSB University in Poznań. His research interests primarily focus on two dimensions of the language learner, that is personality and language learning strategies. As a university teacher, he seeks to develop his students' involvement in the learning process, and capitalize on their personal knowledge.

e-mail: jakub.przybyl@amu.edu.pl

Majid Elahi Shirvan Assistant Professor of Teaching English as a Foreign Language at University of Bojnord, Iran. His major interest is the ecology of language learning and teaching.

e-mail: elahimajid64@gmail.com

Anna Szczepaniak-Kozak, PhD, is Assistant Professor at the Institute of Applied Linguistics at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, Poland. Her main academic interests are within the field of applied linguistics, particularly intercultural studies, interlanguage (acquisitional) pragmatics, foreign language instruction and teaching-oriented studies of hate speech. She is the author of two books, the co-editor of six monographs, and the author of more than 40 scientific papers. Currently, she is working as a researcher in a project financed by the European Commission titled RADAR (Regulating Anti-Discrimination and Anti-Racism) devoted to hate speech.

e-mail: szczepaniakkozak@gmail.com

Tahereh Taherian is an MA candidate of Teaching English as a Foreign Language at Ferdowsi University of Mashhad, Iran.

e-mail: taherian87@yahoo.com

Emilia Wąsikiewicz-Firlej received both her MA in English studies and PhD in applied linguistics from Adam Mickiewicz University (AMU), Poznań, Poland. Currently, she is Assistant Professor in the Department of Ecocommunication of AMU. Her teaching practice encompasses a range of subjects, including EFL and ESP at all levels, professional communication, public relations, theory of communication, public speaking, British culture and literature, MA and BA seminars. She specializes in applied linguistics and her research delves into professional communication, ecolinguistics and the discourse of business and advertising.

e-mail: emiliawf@amu.edu.pl

Bartosz Wolski received his doctoral degree in applied linguistics from Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań, Poland. Currently, he is a lecturer at the Faculty of Philology of the State University of Applied Sciences in Konin, Poland. His research interests include American Studies, methodology of American Studies teaching, the use of ICT's in education, and constructivist approaches to teaching and learning.

e-mail: bartwol@gmail.com